COLUMBIA DEMOCRAT.

"I have sworn upon the Attar of God. eternal hestility to every form of Tyranny over the Bird of Man."-Thomas Jefferson,

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED BY H. WEBB.

olume II.

BLOOMSBURG, COLUMBIA COUNTY, PA. SATURDAY, APRIL 28, 1838.

Number 1.

OFFICE OF THE DEMOCRAT. ENT DOOR TO ROBISON'S STADE OFFICE

COLUMBIA DEMOCRAT WHILE will shed every Suturday morning, at TOO DOLLARS per unnum, payals, alf yearly in a vance, or Two Dollars Fifty Cents, if not paid within the year-subscription will be taken for a shortes period than six months; nor any discons between to it.

tinuance permitted, until all arrearages Besiness obl

IDVERTISEMENTS not exceeding a One Dollar for the first three insertions, and Twenty-five cents for every subsequent ascrion. 27.4 liberal discount le to those who a twertise by the year NITERS addressed on business, must post paid.

From the Baltimore Chronicks.

ong of the American Girl

Our hearts are with our native land, Our song is for her glory; Her warrior's wreath is in our hand, Our lips breathe out her story. Her lofty hills and valleys green Are smiling bright before us; And like a rainbow sign is seen Her proud flag waving o'er us.

And there are smiles upon our lips For those who meet their formen, For glory's star knows no eclipse When smiled upon by woman. for those who brave the mighty deep, And scorn and threat of danger, We've spiles to cheer-snd tears to weep For every occan ranger.

ar hearts are with our native land, Our sone is for her freedomt We love to taintless air we breathe, The factom's endless power, "Il twee for him a fadeless wreath Who some a syrant's power.

They tellof France's beauties rare, Of " My's" proud daughters; Of Scotlad's lasses - England's fair, And lymphs of Shannon's waters; W had not all their bonsted charms, Tough lords above them hover; Our pry lies in Freedom's arms,- Fron the Boston Transcript. THE LAST POTATOE.

A Leeman for a lover,

"Fis my lat, last potatoe, Yet boldlyli stand With the almnes of Cato, My fork is my band Not one in the backet? M set you also go! (With sorrow 4 ask it,) Stall I ped ye or no?

I could mild a cold one; I'm hungry I find- " You may zo to the Old One! Vve made up my mind. By Heavensl to dash ye At once to the ground, Segns crust; I'll much ye! Perhaps-je're unsound!

La's make an incision, (There's no need to peel ye.) Il let in the vision, Toudge if ye'ere mealy. How wholesome! how turfy It smells through the mist! Good bye, my sweet Murphy!

Oh, who could resist?

blest Eden, had been ate the forbidden, I should have sin,-For who in his senses, Would long be in doubt, "Twixt Earth and potatoes, Or Eden without.

and self-sufficiency generally process rience of the world and ignorance of lately fought at Baltimore between Weapon, fists and finger nails-cause, in debate by out of them respecting tig little

MISCELLANEOUS.

FEMININE HEROISM.

Baron Reitzer was accustomed to spend the summer at a charming villa, situated to most romantic part of Germany, a considerable distance from the main road. His castle, standing at the top of an eminence, corresponding with his large fortune; it was sparious and elegant, and situated some and od yords distant from the village which a yours and charming women, under the square will be conspicuously inserted at protection of his most faithful servants. He had her been absent above two days, when, as the baroness was just going to ed, a sudder poise was heard in an adjoining apartment. She called for her servants but no answer was returned, while the m ise an w louder very minute. Not because of this unusual prear she slipped on a night gown, and wento the door to see what could o custon the increasing noise,

Any women less interpid than herself, would have fainted at the dreadful sight which sie beheld on opening the door. Two of her men servants lay half naked on the floor, with their braiss tlasted out; the whole apartment was filled with strange men of a most horrid aspect; her woman was kneeling before one of them, and in that very moment was pieceed through the heart by one of the midnight ruffins. When the door was opened, two of these burbarians rushed towards it with drawn swords. What man, however great his courage, would not have been appalled by terror, and either attempted to save himself by flight, or throwing himself prostrate as the feet of the robbers, have conjured them differently.

'Are you here at last?' exclaimed she, with apparent rapture, flying towards her aggressors with an eagerness that surprised them, and made them pause, just as they

ers what do you mean by that? The teach

He brandished his cutless; but his comrade arrested his arm.

Stop a moment brother, let us hear what she wants of us."

'Nothing else, my brave lads, but what is agreeable to yourselves. I see you have made quick work here. You are men of my own mind, and you will not repent it, if you will listen quietly to me for a few moments."

'Speak!' exclaimed the whole crew. *Speak! but be brief, vociferated the most

you after your people,"

'I doubt much whether you will,' said the lady after you hear what I have to my. myself, as my tyraat is the meanest and bove ground, let us see what we can do unmost jealous wretch on earth. I hate him der ground. Follow me to the cellar. more bitterly than words can express, and have long been anxious of breaking my coms. I should have cloped long ago, has of the cellar, which was secured by a strong I been able to effect my escape. * My ser-iron trap door. The baroness pretanded to twenty two years old and may, at least per; Here, said she giving a bunch of keys or willing to take me with min, I should you obtain the consent of your companions." not hestime to follow him; no matter whereyou six thousand dotters richer.

Robbers of this discription are indeed two minutes I will be back in a trice, villams of the blackest dye, but nevertheless they cease not to be men. The ua- and before two menutes were clapsed, the expected tenor of their prisoner's address sound of her foursteps was already heard the more than common charms of a young from the court yard. On coming near the female, only slightly dressed-all this pro- cellar door, she exclaimed with pratended duced most singular effects in the hearts of joy, though out of breath, 'I have it! I have apart for a few minutes. The baroness trance throwing him headlong down the stood some distance, but made not the least celler stairs. The trap door was bolted attempt to escape; she heard several of with the quickness of lightning and the them say, Down with her, and the farce whole band were eneaged in the cellar. All will be at an end;' but it scarcely changed this was the work of a moment. In the her colour, as she also remarked, on the next place she flew over the court-yard, set--consequence, each of them was so other hand, that this proposal was o jected ting fire to a solitary stable full of straw and t the folks " did at know which was to by the rest. One of the band, who hay, and the flames blazed instantly aloft, as it is written, that it is not good for man to be went up to her and asked her if her words might be relied on; whether see was really bell. In a few moments the castle yard desirons of eloping from her lord and accompanying them & whether she was willing to ordered some of them to extinguish the rolling its vast floods along our city to sucrender her person to any one for expoyment?-She replied to all these questions baron's armory, and having distributed in the affirmative; and not only endured, but returnde the kiss of the robber;--for red them to surround the cellar and the what does not extreme necessity excuse, orders were obeyed, and not one of the band Having by these means gained the confi- escaped his well merited fate. dence of the robbers, their leader said to her 'Come, then and show us the se-Desiness obliged the Baron to quit the cret recesses of the castle; I know it is dancastle for a few days, and to leave his bady, gerous to rely on the sincerny of woman of your rank-we shall venture it for once, but you may rest assured I will cleave your head to the shoulders, though it were ten times more charming, if you make the least attempt to escape, or impose upon us. Then my head will be perfectly safe,' replied the baroness, smiling, as if she really burned with an engerness for plunder, and a long wished for escape.

Snatching up a candle, she conducted them to every apartment; opening every door, closet and chest, unasked; assisting in emptying their contents; divering the robbers with the most jovial sallies or homor; jumping with apparent indifference over the dead bodies of her mangled servants; conversing with every one of these plunderers, as if they were old acquaintances; and mannesting a degree of sansfaction that could not but remove every suspicion.

Plate, money, jewls, and every thing valmable that could be found were now colleced, and the captain ordered his band to prepare instantly for quitting the castle when dren, his imended mistress suddenly laid hold of

"Did I not tell you," exclaimed she, that, you would not repent of having saved my life, and that I should prove myself your to save his lifet. But the baroness acted real friend, you are dexterous enough at and cant for their lives tell what has become emptying the chests you find open, but of the hard money. your lyex eyes could never discover the secret recesses of this castle."

'Secret? what? where!' eageraly exclaimed the whole band, were tendy to strike the flats blow. 'Are you here attlest?' exclaimed she ones more: the deverse action, rejoined the barone so the deverse action has seried recession tors like you'

Wished?' round out one of the marder. pointed to a secret spring in the baron's writing desk. The robbers of ned it, and shouted with joy and astonishment on dis-

'Bravo!' exclaimed the captain, 'I see now that thou art an excellent woman, thou aside for a rainy day.

shalt lend the tile of a duchess." 'You will be still better pleased with me,' interrupted she, laughing, 'when I show terrible of them; 'for we shall soon send the day before yesturday, ten thousand dol-

'Not a sy'l ble, where are they?'-

*Under lock and key, you would never I am married to the weatimest nobleman have found the iron cliest in which they in the country, but the wife of the meanest are, were I not leagued with you. Follow beggard cannot be more miserable than me comrads, we have made clear work a-

The robbers followed her, but took the precaution to guard against any sudden surtetters, and paying my tyrant in his own prise by posting a sentinel at the entrance vanis are all his spies, and that fellow you- take no notice of this, leading the band onder, whose skull you have so bravely man- ward to the most remote recesses of the then, was the worst of all. My tormentor spacious cellar. Having unlocked the door even compels me to steep alone.-1 am out a large iron chest was discovered in a corflatter mystar of notbeing totally desired of to the capitals, my whether you can open it personal charms, should any one of you and take its contents in lieu of a dowry, if

The robber tried one key after another, erhis residence be in a cavern or a village but none fitted the keyhole. Let me try, ale-nonse. Nor will you repent of having said she, I hope I shall be more successful. saved my life. You are min castle amply I fear least the dawn of morning-Half! sured with consuces, but it is impossible bah! I now concerve why neither you, not the forge bellows. you can be acquainted with every secret myself can open it. Excuse my mistake recess in it. I will discover them to you, welcome as your visit is to me, the joy of and you may treat me as you have treared your unexpected arrival has, nevertheless my woman, if this descovery does not make disconcerted me a little. I have taken the wro ig banch of keys. Have patience only served the blaze, and rung the alarming was crowded with peasants. The baroness finnes, while she conducted the rest to the to the deep, now presents. The Mississipswords and fire arms amongst them, desi-

With these words she flew up the suirs,

UNCLE BENJAMIN'S SERMON,

Not many Lours ago, I heard Uncle Benjamin discussing this matter to his son, who was complaining of the pressure,- Rely upon it, Sammy,' said the old man, as he eaned on his suff with his gray locks flowing in the breeze of a May morning, 'murmoring pays no bills. I have been an observer my time this fifty years, and I never saw a man helped out of a hole by cursinghis horses. Be as quiet as you can, for nothing will grow under a moving harrow. and discontent narrows the mind. Matters are bad, I acknowledge, but no nicer is any the better for bagering. The more you grown the poorer you grow.

· Repining at losses is only putting pepper into a sore eye. Crops will fait thiste soils, and we may be thankful that we have not a famine. Besides I always took notice, that whenever I feit the rod smartly, it was as much as to say, 'Here is sometunng which I have got to learn.' Sammy, dont forget that your schooling is not over yet, though you have a wife and two chil-

· Ave, said Sammy, you may say that, & a mother-in-law and two apprentices into the bargoist and I should like to know what a poor man can learn here, when the greatest scholars and lawyers are at logger-heads.

Solly, Sammy, I am one than you. I have not got these gray hairs and this erooked back without some burders. could tell you stokes of the day of course agreed money; when my application each to turn a conce took with the to pay for a centing or a wheat fan . and when the Jersey women used thorns for "pins, and laid their ten possaway in the garret. Yeu may

First, that you have exved too Rille, and spent too much. I never taught you to be covering six roulens each containing two a miser, but I have seen you giving your dollar for a 'notion,' when you might have land one half aside for charity, and one hat-

. Secondly, that you have gone too much upon credit. Lalways told you credit was a shadow; it shows that there is a substance you the last, but principle houred of my ty- behind, which cases the shadow; but a rant. I can easily preceive that your spies small body may east a greater shadow; and have informed you of his absence; but tell no wise man will follow the shadow any me have they also told you that he received further than he can see the substance. You may now learn that you have followed the opinion and fashion of others, until you have been decoyed into a hog.

Thirdly, that you have been in too much haste to become rich. Slow and easy, wins the race.

. Fourthly, that no course of life can be depended upon as always prosperous. I am atraid the younger race of working meain America have had a notion that nobody would go to rain on this side the water. -Providence has greatly biessed us, but we have become pre-umpionus.

· Fifthly, that you have not been thankful

. Sixthly, that you may be thankful that our lot is no worse. We might have famine, or pesulence, or war, or tyranny, or all to-

* And, lastly, to end my sermon, you may learn to offer, with more understanding, the prayer of your infancy, . Give us this day our daily bread,

The old man ceased, and Sammy put on his apron and told Dick to blow away at

CURIOUS FACTS.

A great many facts may be added to show the neth leacy of capital punishment. The crimina returns of Great Britain show, that there has been as horse-stealing within the last seven years, without any execution whatever than in the preceding seven years, with forty-two executions-that ther has been less sheep-stealing during the four year supsed since the abolition of capital punishment than during the four previous years; that there have cen fewer acts of burghry and house-breaking is the last three with only two executions, than I men whose hands were just stained with found it!"-and in the same moment bounds three years ending with 1830, when thirty-no blood. They formed a ring, and consulted ed suddenly against the sentinel at the cu- persons suffered death for those offences. But no so of other crimes for which capital punishmen still continuess, for they have nearly all increased.

Quarter Countries.-Hum! yes and verily. Penciope, the spirit urgeth and moveth me wondrough to beseech thee to cleave unto me, and become fiesh of my flesh, and bone of my bone. Hum! Truly, Obedian, thou hast said wisely and inasmuch seemed to be captain of the benditti, now The watchmen in the adjacent village ob- alone, to and behold I will separat with these littles of the water dealers.

THE ETERNAL RIVER.

We have never viewed a greater special ele than that which the mighty stream, pi, even in its mildest mood, is terrible .-When it pours along its dark waters beneath the gentle gleamings of a mid-summer's sunset; or when its gliding ripples are burnished by the silvery effulgence of the midnight moon, its course is still mighty, fearful, resistless; and we think of its for lonely journeying, and the scenes it has witnessed, and we look upon its placid surface shadowed by the forests of its banks, and it seems to us in all its majestic magnificence, only as the giant slumbering from his labor.

But when the beautiful spring time is over, and the balmy mounlit evening of aummer is past, and autumn's shadowy glory is no more; when winter broads over desolated nature, then it is that the "terri-ble Mississippi" assumes all its fearfulness of aspect, and we realize that we are gazing ipon the mightiest stream, with but a single exception, that flows upon our globe .--All then is unmingled grandeur, sublimity, magnificence. Turn your eye even now, over its troubled surface, and what a spectaele of grandeur does that mighty mass of volumed waters present! The opposite shore s desolate, and bleak, and cheerless-the naked banks rise steep from the rushing stream, mantled with ice-the trees are eafless and drear, at intervals through their ure, weatherbeaten tronks you eateh a limpse of an ancient mound upon the mooth prairie, while far away in the blue listance, standing out against the dim casern horizon, are perceived the long line of white cliffs, or the rounded summits of he bluffs, sweeping away from the view. Bloody Island in the midst of the rushing tream atretches out its barren, sandy hores, sad and gloomy as a grave yard! ah! grave varil ' and when the associations game train and when the associations game train to the associations to the associations to the associations to the associations to the association to the associations to the association to the as

LEGAL DEXTERITY.

The anecdote now going the rounds of the ress, from a London paper, of General Wiron's advice to the I en husn, who emplained that an Englishman knowled im down whenever he attempted to rise -'My friend, when an Englishman knocks ou down, never do you get up until he has gone away, reminds me of a story of Sergeant Davy. The Sergeant having abused a witness, as sergeants will abuse witnesses, was on the following morning, whilst in bed informed that a gentleman wished to speak to him; the sergeant concluded that it was a client, desired that he might be shown up: the visiter, stating is name reminded the sergeant of the abuse which he had heaped on him on the preceding day, protesting that he could not out up, with the imputations, and must have immediate satisfaction, or he should resort o personal chastisement On this the sergeant, raising himself up said, 'But you won't muck me surely, while I'm in bed, will you?" "I'e tainly not," said the aggrieved party; * I should never think of attacking a man in bed.' Then I'll be shot,' said the surgeout, s he laid himself down, wrapping enough to God, for his benefits in past the clothes around him, if I get out of hed while you are in this own.'-London

> Practical ality of working iron from the aw material with anthrocite coal, has long been considered a desiderature, especially for Pennsylvania, a country abounding ahave all others, in the articles of iron ore and anthracite coal. We are gravified to earn that Mr. I-and C. Briant of the Northera Liberties, Philadelphia, has successfulv effected the object at Manayunk. The gentlemens concerned with him, are, we understand, perfectly satisfied with the success of the experiments which have been made. Iron of a superior quality has been oraduced with a very small consumption of fuel. Mr. Briant is of opinion that it will not require more than one pound of coal to nake one pound of pig iron, being iros than me half the quantity of coke, from the hiuminous coal, which has been usually enplayed for the same purpose. Mr. Briant formed his plan, and mentioned it, before my account was published of the experiments made by Mr. Crane in Wales.

Amer. Daily Adv.

Ran Hanaryas .-- A soldier went into a shop at Brighton to purchase some trifling article, and beerving some red herrings lying on the counter, asked what they were. To which the shopkeeper replied, Soldiers, my friendl' 'Are they so,' rejained the sun of Mars, then I'll take them so deserters.' And walked off with his prisoners, to the great amusement of the bustonders and charries